

The next chapter.

A plan for African Ancestry.

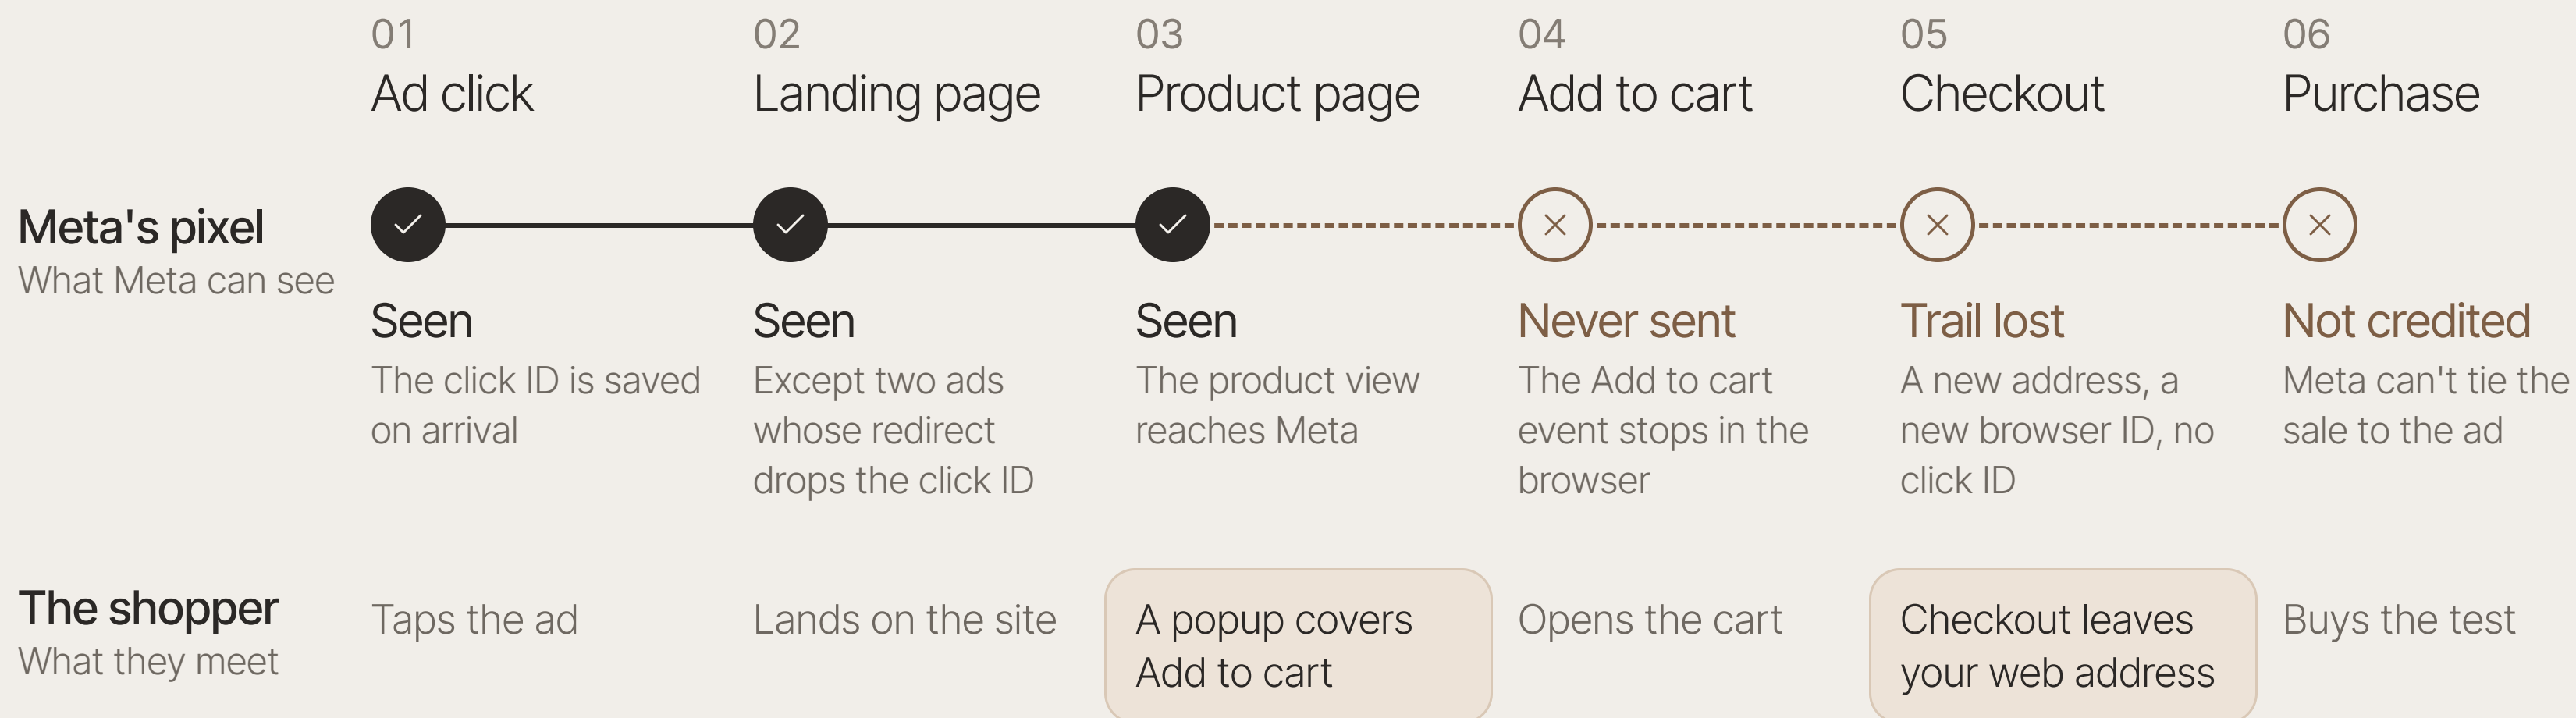

Prepared for Gina Paige · September 2026

Dario Calmese · Calvary Rogers · Obed Appiah-Agyeman

Where the purchase journey breaks

Shoppers keep going. Meta loses the trail.

In August, Meta ads got the same clicks as July and reported half the purchases.

Possibility 01 · Stabilize the back end

Let every sale count.

The opportunity: your ad budget, at full strength

- Tracking

Meta sees every step

Add to cart and purchases reach Meta, with the click ID kept from the ad to the sale.
- Checkout

Checkout on your own address

checkout.africanancestry.com, with the privacy promise beside the button and no popups on the way.
- Site performance

Fast pages that search and AI can read

Product pages that load in seconds on a phone, with every word readable.

The path of a sale

✓	Ad click	Meta sees it
✓	Landing page	Meta sees it
✓	Add to cart	Meta sees it
✓	Checkout	Meta sees it
✓	Purchase	Meta sees it

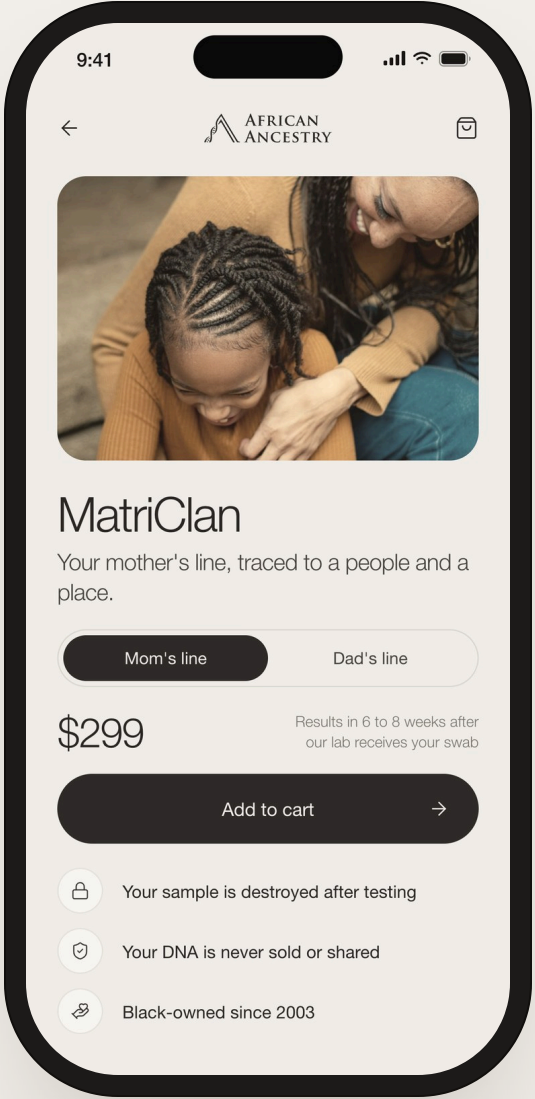

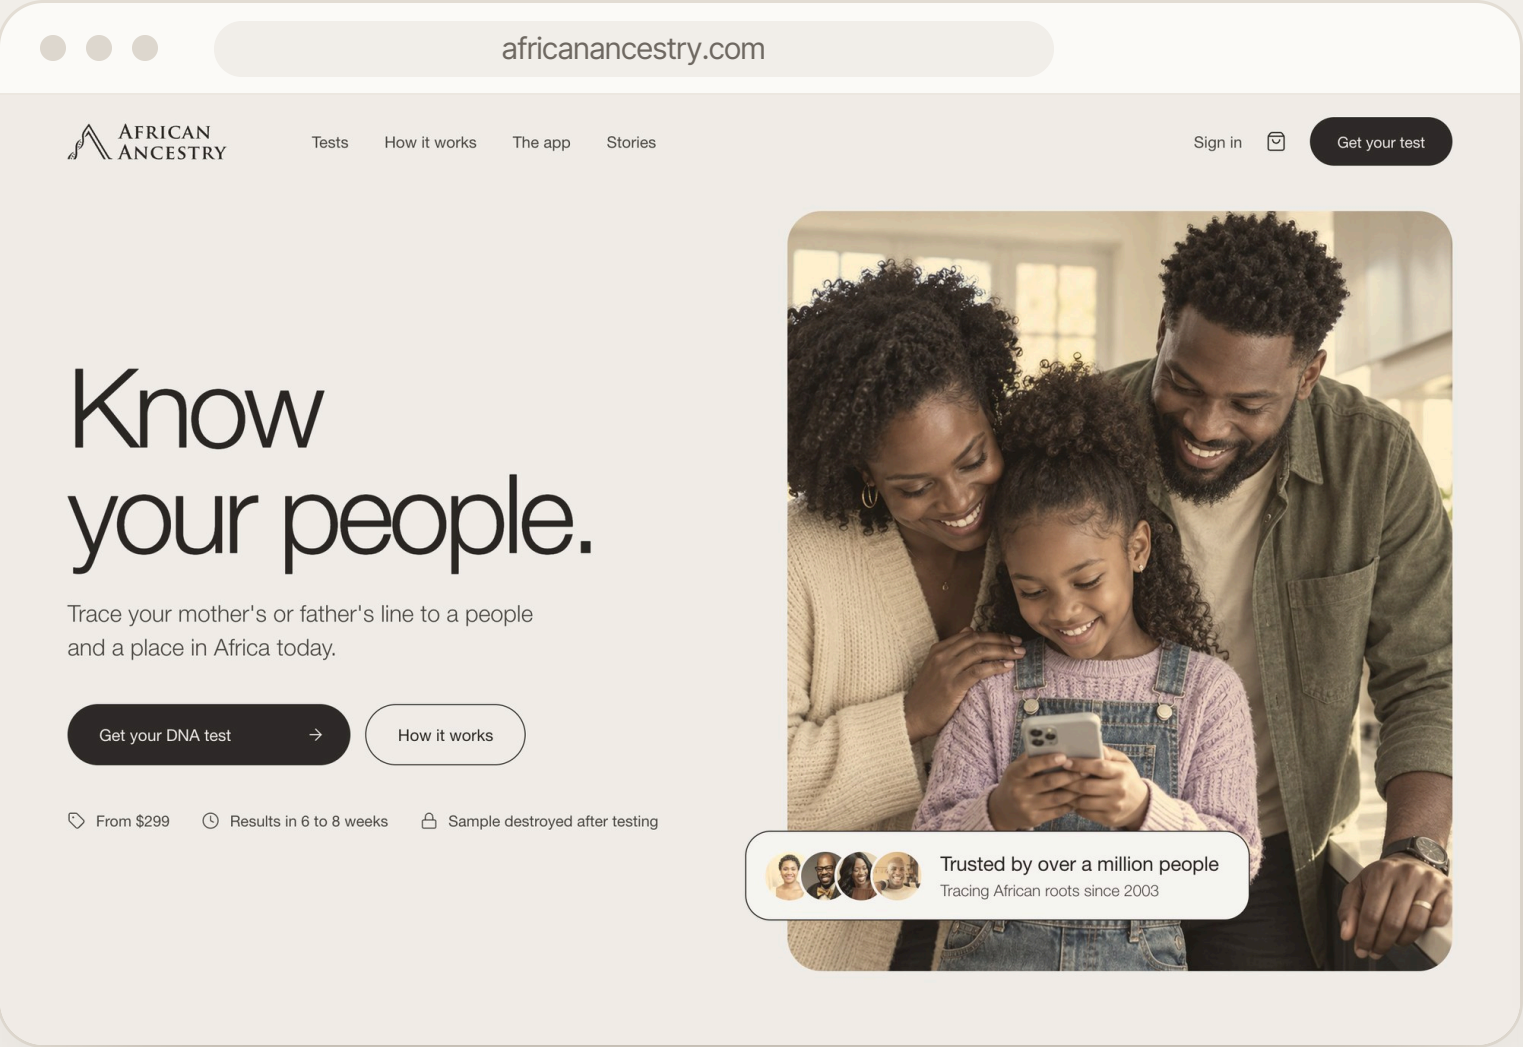

Meta sees what Shopify sees

→

Possibility 02 · Relaunch the storefront

A storefront worthy of the test.

The opportunity: more buyers per click

A faster path to cart
Ad to checkout in three taps, with nothing in the way.

Clear pricing
$299 and results timing on the first screen.

The privacy promise, up front
Sample destroyed, DNA never sold, right beside Add to cart.

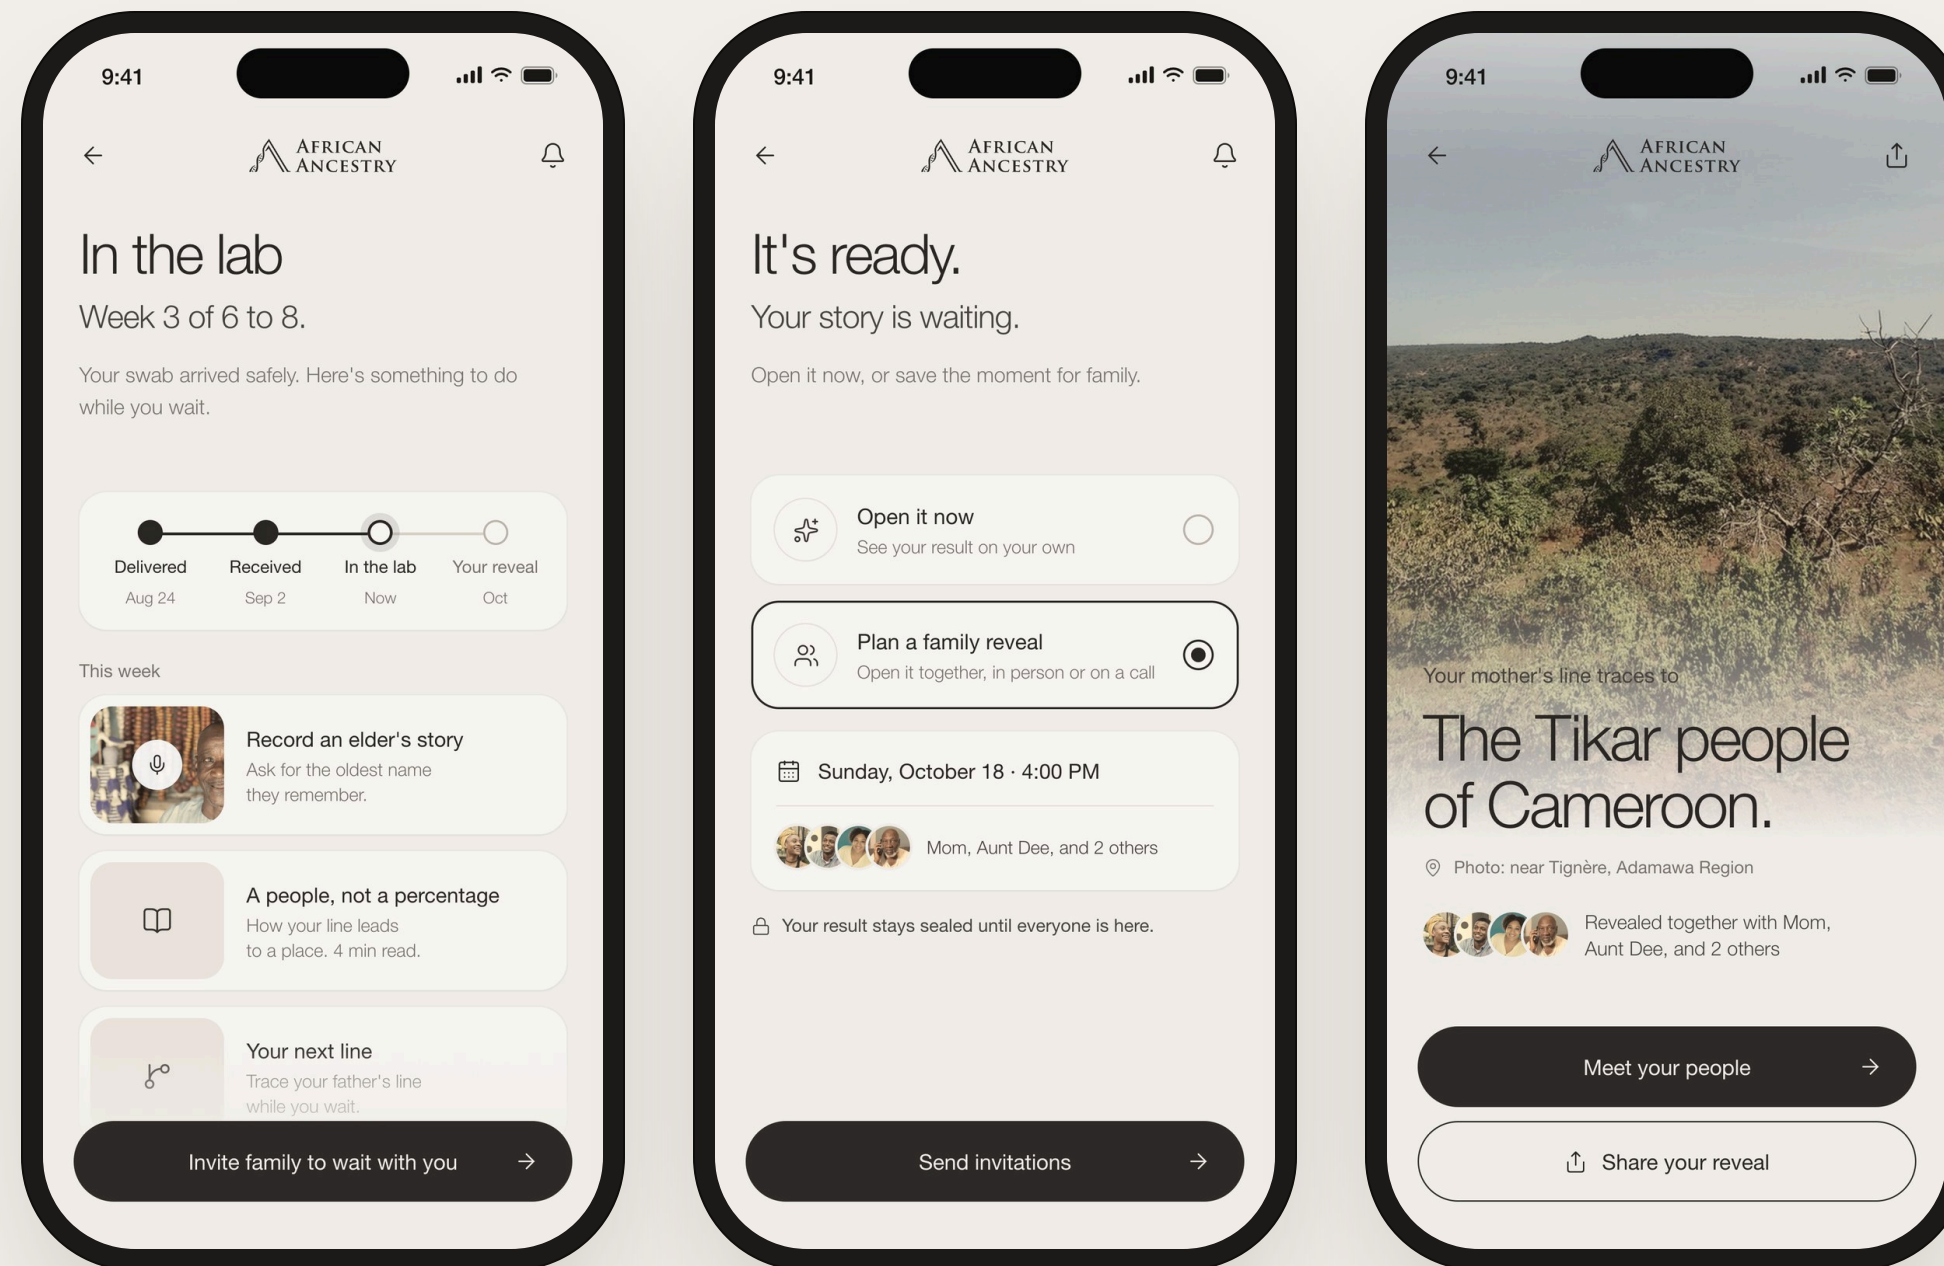

Simpler words for each line
Mom's line or Dad's line, in plain words.

Possibility 03 · The family experience

Make the wait part of the story.

The opportunity: a family that opens it together

01

While you wait

Track the kit to the lab. Each week, a short read and a prompt to record an elder.

02

Invite the family

Results arrive sealed. Plan a reveal and open it together, in person or on a call.

03

The reveal

A people and a place, told like a story.